I hate to admit it, but the only movies I've seen at the theater the past couple years have been Marvel movies. I really don't even like Marvel that much, I just want an excuse to get out and go the cinema. Saw that new Thor movie a couple hours ago and thought it was alright, though it started to dip into "so bad it's kind of good and kind of painful to watch" territory near the end when Thor shoots Thor Magic™ at children and they all get CGI glowy eyes and start beating the shit out of CGI shadow monsters.

Just pretend you're walking along the beach, we'll edit it in later.

Wow, even though he died before they could finish the movie, they managed to use computer wizardry to bring them back to life, or at least, they brought a hollow CGI replica of them back to life.

They're putting gay people in movies now? !

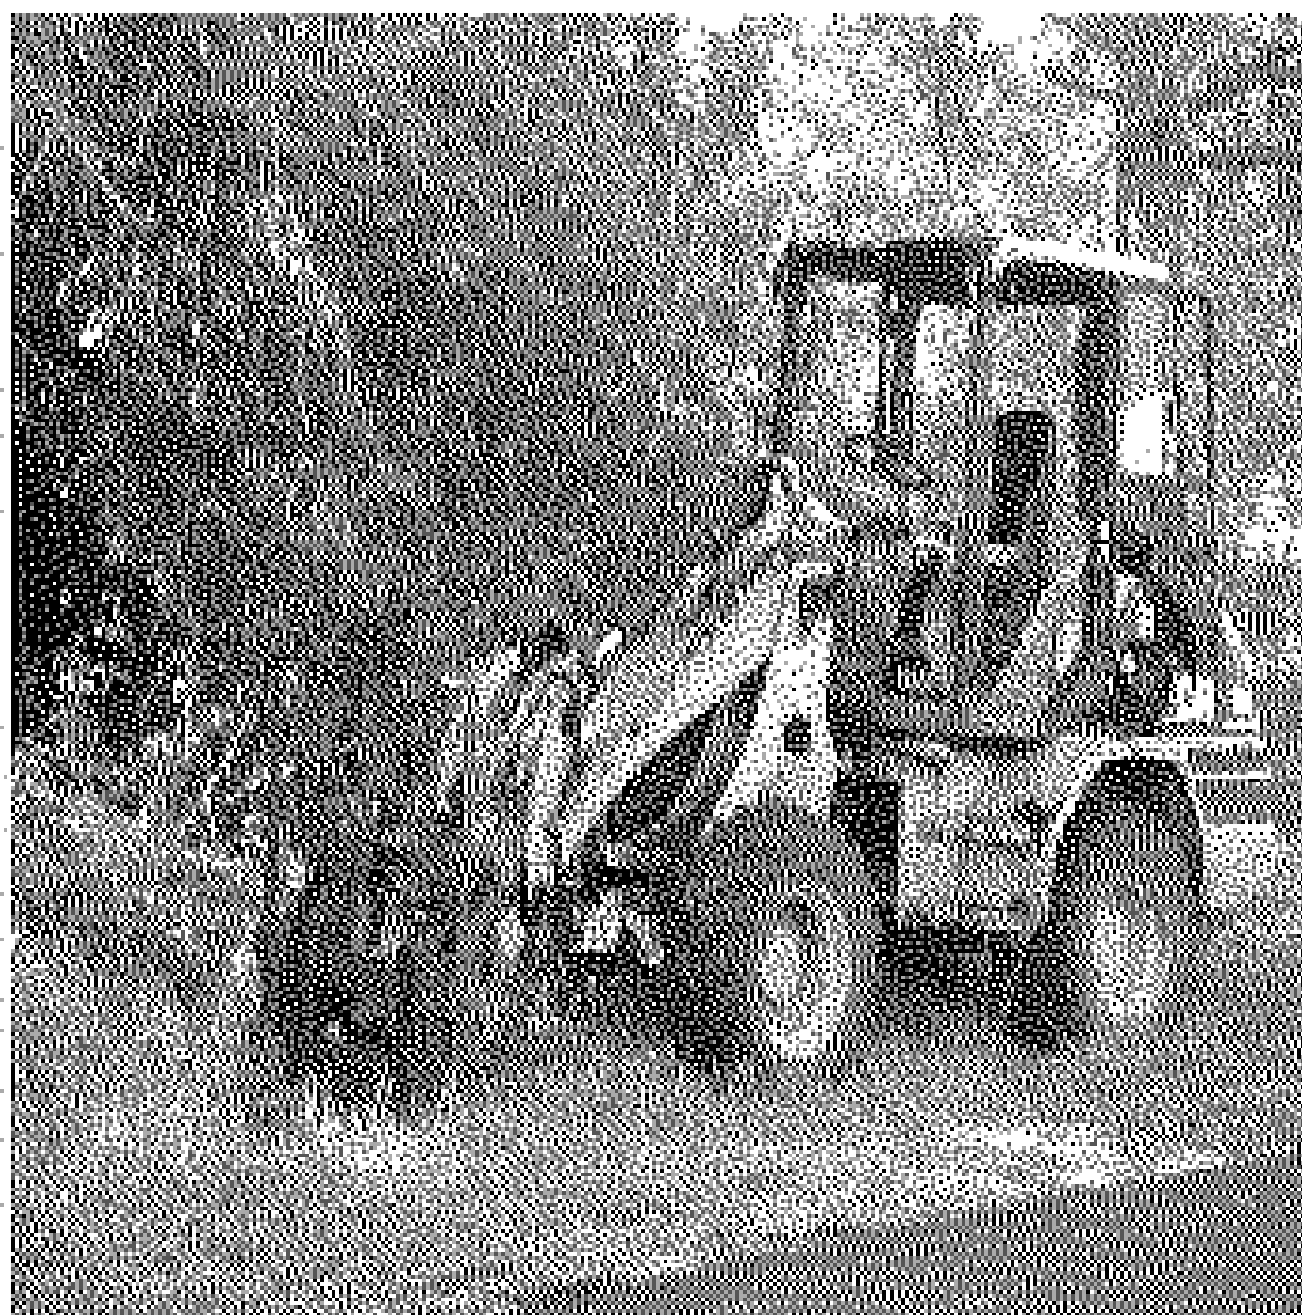

I love you, Dwayne Douglas Johnson.

It's the same movie except everyone is older and everything is worse.

Rest well, it'll all be worth it some day
